It is one of my favorite publications. Indeed, it can be playful, nonetheless an interesting and amazing literature. I discovered this publication from my father and he suggested this publication to understand.

A Retrospective View of the Progress of Horticulture in the United States during the year 1847. By the editor. After four successive years of unusual drought in the Eastern States, that of 1847 was one of more than the average of moisture; vegetation of all kinds has been vigorous, rapid and healthy: crops have been abundant and good, and, with the exception of the still-continued potato rot, no season could yield a richer harvest. Fruit trees of all kinds have made a remarkably fine growth, and, though the fall was protracted and mild unusually late, the wood ripened well, and the promise of fruit another season is excellent. January last was a rather mild and favorable month, with but little unpleasant weather, and with scarcely any snow. February was ushered in with snow, continued variable with more snow, and the last week of the month was severely cold. March was a rather cold month; the first week was pleasant and mild, but, up to the 22d, it continued steadily cold, and the last week was unusually severe for the season. April opened more severe than we have known it for several years; on the 1st, the thermometer stood at only 10 . It continued quite cold and unpleasant up to the middle of the month, at which time the frost was not out of the ground sufficiently to plough: it remained unusually cool to the end of the month. The first week in May was exceedingly cool, but warm weather succeeded, and, on the 10th, peaches were...
